

Solar Entrepreneur Recognized at the Museum of American Finance

January 11, 2008 - altPOWER founder and President, Anthony O. Pereira was at the members reception of the newly opened Museum of American Finance, an affiliate of the Smithsonian Institution, for the first viewing of the permanent display of 'Entrepreneurs'. 'Entrepreneurs' is a series of interactive oral history stations featuring prominent entrepreneurs.

Anthony O. Pereira joined other American business entrepreneurs such as David Neeleman, founder of JetBlue and Kay Koplovitz, founder of USA Networks and the first woman network television President. altPOWER President & CEO, Anthony Pereira was thrilled that he was part of this display: "I am honored to have been selected to be part of a group of great American Entrepreneurs, in this fine institution which celebrates finance here on Wall Street, at the center of financial capital of the world."

The Museum of American Finance opened to the public on January 11th 2008 at its new location at 48 Wall Street, and the entrepreneurs display is a permanent display at the museum.
